

Welcome Everyone. This morning I am honored to present the Good Citizenship Award sponsored by U. S. Congressman Ryan Costello.

In school, children are routinely taught the importance of being good citizens. By exhibiting good citizenship skills, individuals show that they are productive and caring members of society. Good citizens treat others with respect, they respect authority, and they respect the environment.

This award recognizes two students who demonstrate outstanding character, scholarship, leadership and acceptance of responsibility all of which are an intrinsic part of good citizenship.

These students are also recognized for their involvement in school activities and demonstrating a spirit of cooperation with fellow students and teachers.
